Research Fellow
May - August 2017 • Rochester, MN

Stephanie Song
Junior, Neuroscience, Wellesley College

♥ What I liked

Mayo Clinic is an absolutely fantastic and inspiring institution. Additionally, everybody there was very welcoming, accommodating, and offered to help in any way possible to make this an enjoyable and productive experience for me.

★ What I wish was different

Because I was considered a "non-employee" (not an official paid student intern) I did not enjoy the gym benefits.

💬 Advice

I got this through reaching out to my professor and joining his lab, so I encourage others to do the same. Also, prepare to work very independently and have your own creative ideas. My internship was not structured at all, and I was responsible for finding my own ultimate research topic.

Project management intern

June - August 2017 • Glendale, CA

Austin Ha
Senior, Electrical Engineering & Computer Science, University of Pennsylvania

♥ What I liked

Hands on experience as a project manager for a suite of applications handling movie order fulfillment to theaters, well developed project management office

★ What I wish was different

During my short 2.5 months, 3 contractors were let go making me question the overall culture for engineers in Disney.

💬 Advice

Spend a lot of time with project managers learning how they approach their work and their attitude towards their team during times of difficulty.

Do Boeing interns get to have good work-life balance?

Alexandra Grochowski 15 days ago
Senior at University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

The work life balance will depend on your specific team but you likely will have a good balance between work and life. Most interns work no more than 40 hours a week, if you become full time you may work more depending on the situation. I had plenty of time for extracurricular activities.

The work-life balance is about 40 hours (meaning you work Mon-Thurs) and probably no overtime was required.

Specifically for Summer Analysts, what should I know beforehand to succeed?

Isabel Macaulay 13 days ago
Senior at Emory University

Work ethic is definitely number one, as is the ability to have a thick skin and ask for critical feedback as often as possible. Be transparent about your skills, strengths, and progress. Be prepared to put in face time at the office even if it's unnecessary for you to be there. Understand that it's not always appropriate for interns and beginning analysts to speak/ask questions at certain meetings with senior management present. It's more important to get work done than to get it done perfectly.

Confidence, eagerness to learn, intellectual curiosity, attention to detail, & never being afraid to ask a question. Everyone thinks they have good attention to detail until you get a markup back on a slide deck you put together and see just how much you missed. As long as those mistakes are

Meet employers at events on campus

Employers regularly host events on campus. Don't miss out on the opportunity to meet with them – whether it is a career fair, info session, on-campus interview, or even a coffee chat.

The screenshot displays the Handshake 'Upcoming Events' page. The top navigation bar includes links for Jobs, Events, Q&A, Messages, Career Center, and a user profile for Samhita. Below the navigation, the 'Upcoming Events' section is active, showing a list of events. The events are categorized into 'Events today', 'Events this week', and 'Events in the future'. Each event card features a logo, title, date, time, location, and a 'View Event' button. On the right side, there are four sections: 'Your Upcoming Events', 'Your Upcoming Appointments', 'Your Upcoming Career Fairs', and 'Your Upcoming Interviews', each with a 'Find some events/appointments/fairs/jobs' button.
